

DECEMBER

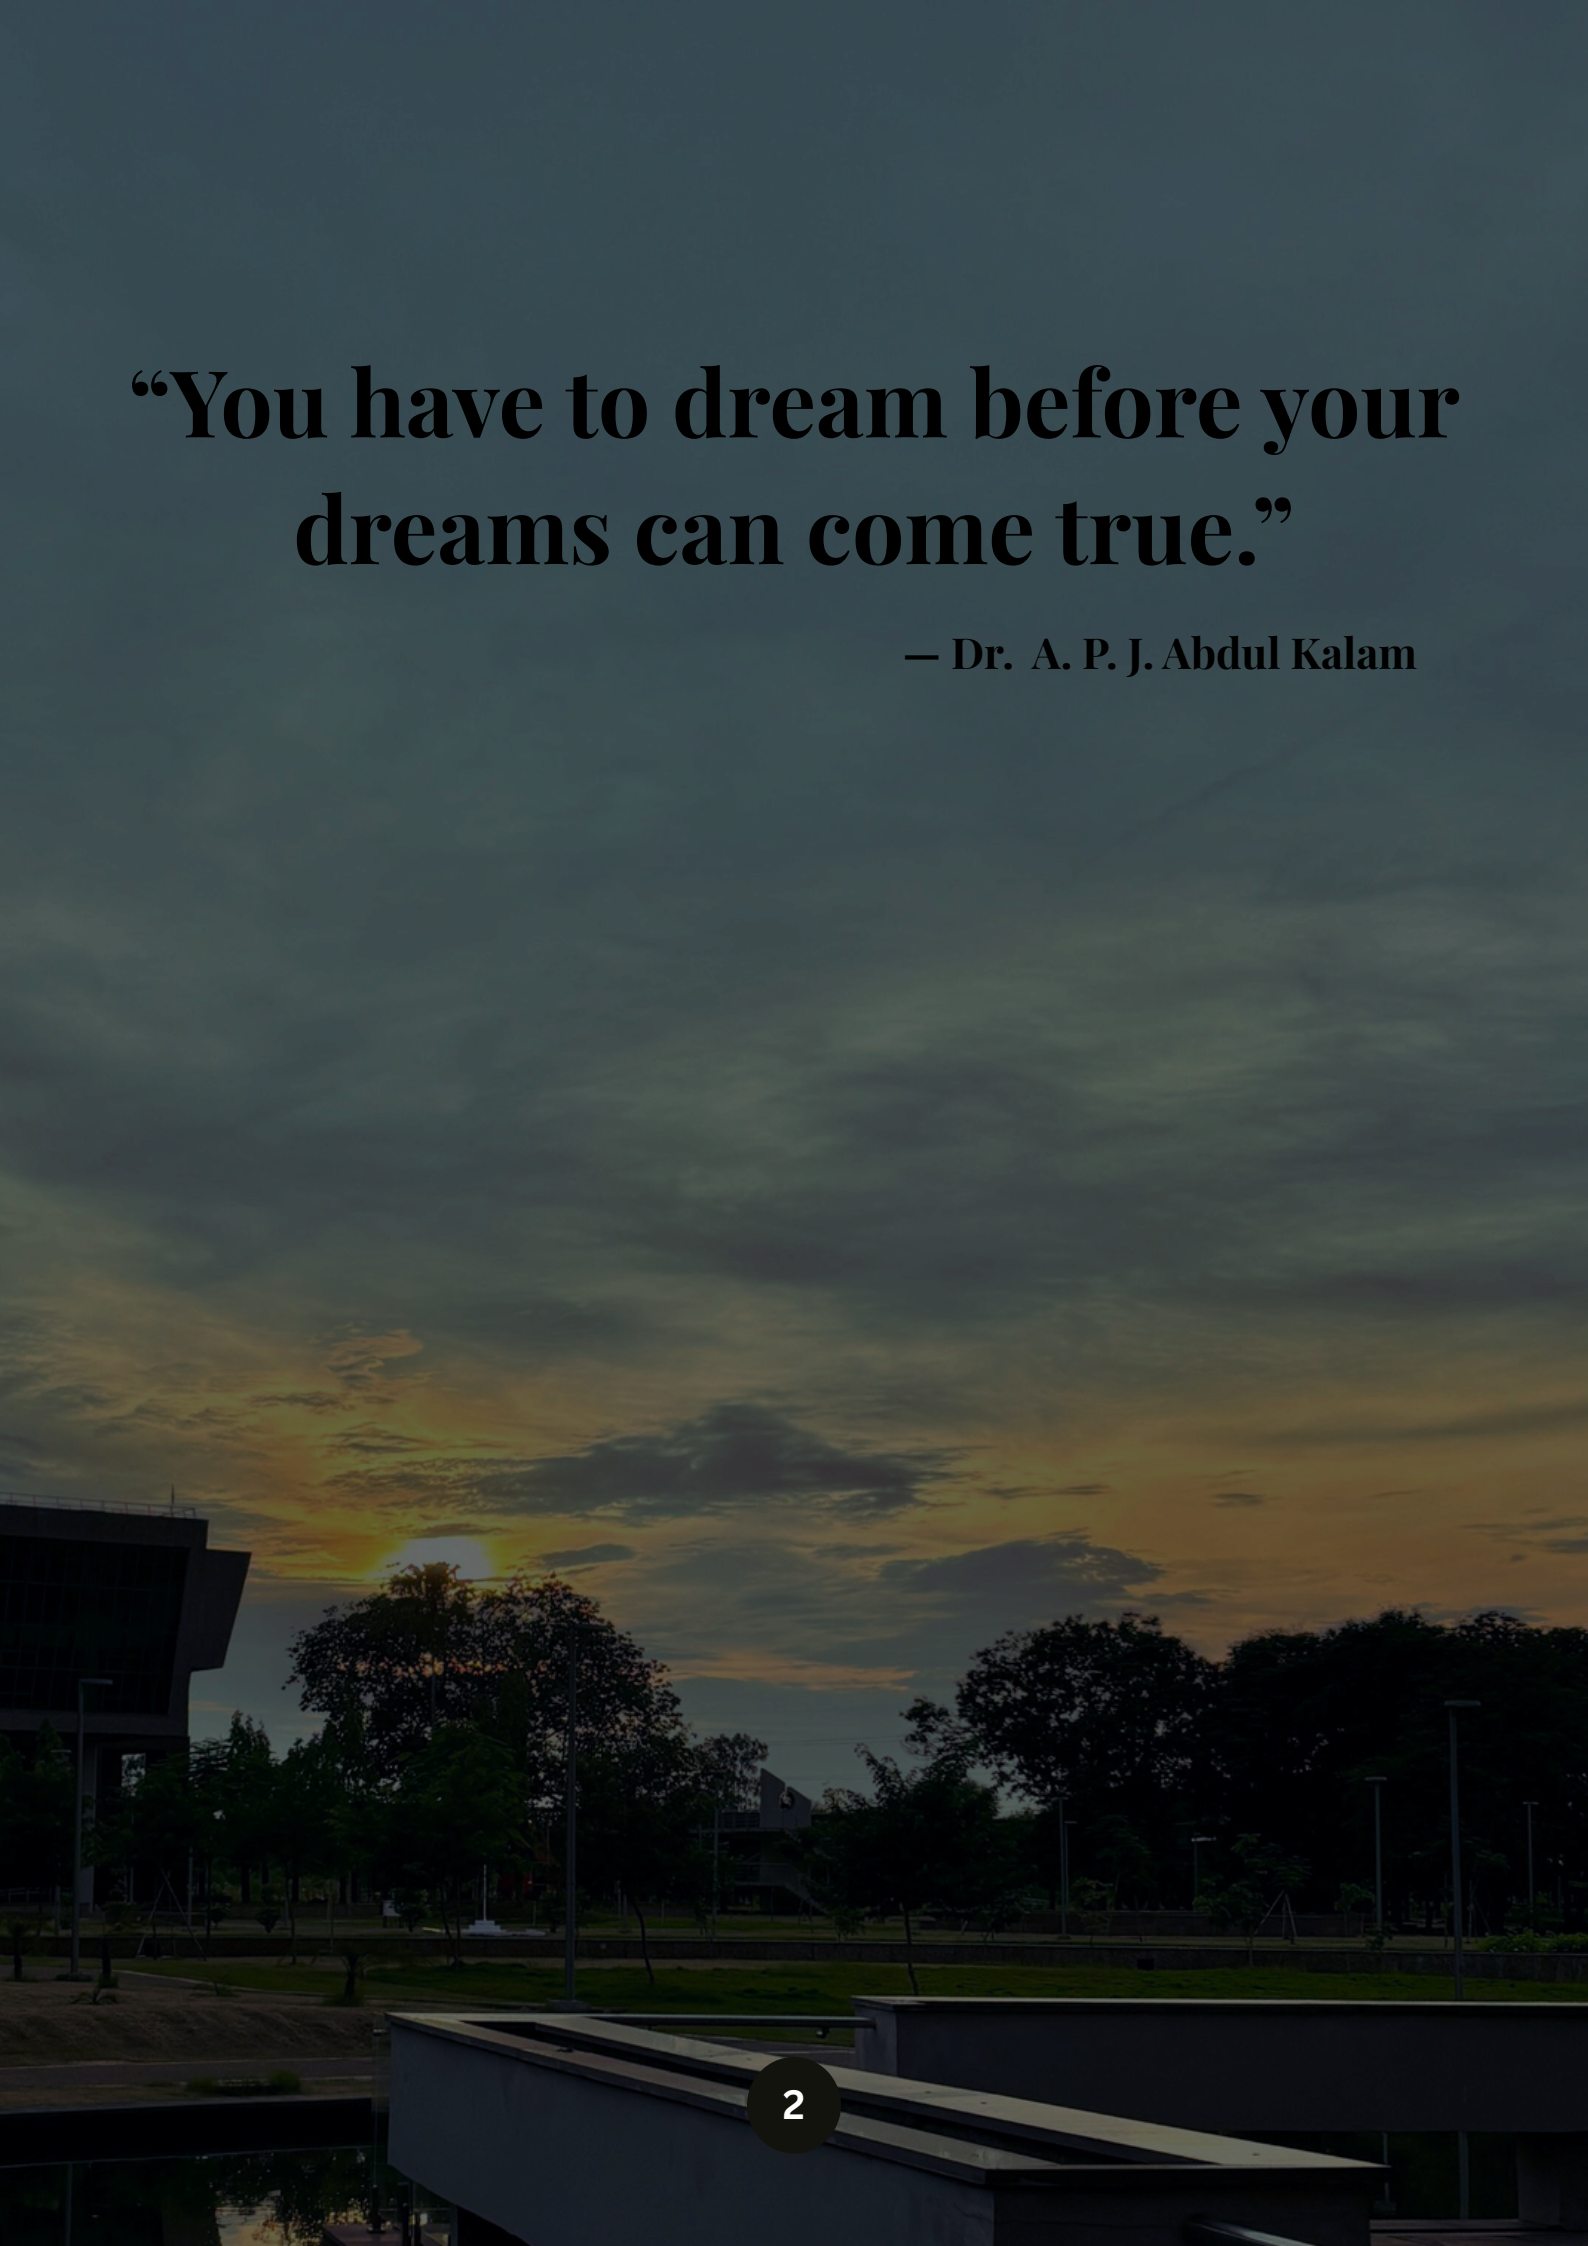

@goals_iitbhilai

दिसंबर

THE INKLING GAZETTE

A soft gathering of stories, stitched together with ink, curiosity, and a quiet sense of wonder.

2025

“You have to dream before your dreams can come true.”

— Dr. A. P. J. Abdul Kalam

An Economy of Absence

An Economy of Absence

"A table for four"

My friend called out,
And we went to the table in the centre of the floor,
The view was perfect,
And the only menu in the vicinity was on our table,
The waiter came first to us,
For the table for four orders more,
Than the loners sitting in dark corners,
And the couples in corners darker still,
We chatted loudly,
Before the food came,
But not a lot of time we got to kill,
In barely any time the starters were there,
One and two and three and more,
The main courses were quick to come too,
I took a delectable bite of this,
and a scrumptious piece of that,
Grinning and laughing in a roar,
The waiter prompted us,
To try something new,
Because always one of us would agree,
Each of us chipped in 5 Rupees,
And the waiter was happy with his 20 Rs. tip.
The bill didn't bother us,
For everything was divided,
On the table for four

But the road to the restaurant is treacherous,
Pits and bumps and puddles and stones,
And it is easy to lose companions there,
Some fell,
Apart,
My cycle kept moving on,
Jolting through the dark,
The chains whirring noisily in the gears.
Some took turns to a different path,
I couldn't watch them go,
Experience told me I should not remove the eyes from my road,
So down the same dust-ridden path I bore,
Some drove by so aloof,
Their lane seemed different now
Reduced to one,
The table for four

And thus I arrive at the restaurant once again.
My table is dim,
Bleak and dark in a mockery of my mood,
My fingertips spend a long time
Underlining the dirty menu ,
My eyes tire from shifting to the right every few seconds;
A refined taste lost on a life so crude.
The waiter doesn't like me,
For I can afford only a measly coin for his tip,
By myself now my drinks I pour
And each time I order the same thing,
A melancholy delight in the surety of it all,
Guilt free that I won't have to waste something I wouldn't end up liking,
It takes long to come,
And I stare wistfully at the table for four

-Vedansh Sharma, DSAI, 2026

संग्राम विराम

नदी किनारे बैठा हूँ,
पर मन में है आराम नहीं।
लहरें मन में हैं उछल रही,
है अंतर मन विश्राम नहीं।

साँसें धीमी, पर ज्वालामुखी
भीतर अब भी वह जलता है,
शब्द मौन हैं होंठों पर,
पर हृदय रोज़ मचलता है।

दृष्टि नदी की गहराई में,
पर मन देखे अतीत को,
हर हार, हर चोट पुकारे,
फिर से रण के गीत को।

थका नहीं, बस थमा हूँ मैं,
कुछ पल को मैं संभाल रहा,
आग अभी भी बाकी है,
केवल राख निकाल रहा।

मैं पत्थर नहीं जो टिक जाऊँ
किसी एक नदी के किनारे पर,
मैं वो धार हूँ जो मोड़ लाऊँ
नदी को अपने ही इशारे पर।

मेरी हार न कोई पराजय,
न ही किस्मत की बंदिश है,
ये तो एक तैयारी है,
फिर से चलने की गुंजाइश है।

नदी किनारे बैठा हूँ,
पर रुकने का कोई नाम नहीं,
शांति दिखे पर भीतर मेरे
चलता अब भी संग्राम वहीं।

-Bambam Harsh
Choudhary, CSE, 2028

Little Failures

I sit with my books,
but the words don't stay.
They slip off the page
and quietly run away.

Everyone says, "Just try harder," but my mind feels full—like a small cup
that's somehow already spilling.

The exam waits tomorrow,
tapping its foot,
and I pretend I don't hear it.
Maybe it will get bored and leave.

Inside me, tiny failures
sit in a row like shy children.
They don't shout,
they just stare at their shoes
and whisper,
"We're still here."

I wish I could tell them
that it's okay,
that we're learning,
that sometimes growing
looks exactly like falling.

Maybe the marks won't shine,
maybe the pages won't love me back
but I'm still trying,
in my small, quiet way.

-Chetan rathod, 2027

Lessons in Guarding

I see you, a soul marked by a premature fire,
a quiet witness to lessons learned too soon.
your silence now is a fortress built higher;
perhaps you thought every heart would sing your tune,
expecting others to reflect your own honest light.
you, if my observation is true, were the one who offered trust too swiftly, bright and outright, only to watch your deepest beliefs come undone.
that harsh schooling—it was essential, wasn't it?
did someone twist your genuine words into a blade?
was this wound from a sanctified memory, complex and fit,
or just a lingering bitterness that won't fully fade?
i notice you've abandoned your favorite shade of blue.
did you see it worn by someone who stole its grace?
ah, the sharp, defining lesson that life taught you:
the cold need to be possessive about your things and space.
perhaps you once implored the very sky to wear that hue.
did it grant your plea, or did it show tinges of pink instead?
maybe your favorite shade of blue was mingled with the blood of hopes that died—a vital price that you dearly paid.
and by that crimson memory, the cost is clear:
you never secured the desires you spoke of in your plight,
not one of the wishes you held so deeply, year after year,
the very ones you whispered to every broken star in the night.
so, what course did you finally take against the odds?
did you bleed for them (endure the fighting) or kill your expectation outright?
have you become that stoic person who leaves things to the gods, untroubled whether fortune brings darkness or brings light?
i think when you let a new person into your guarded sphere,
you immediately craft a world where you believe it's true:
you will trust, and they will ultimately break you. you lack the sheer will to spend long years erasing a person who was once you.
because when you call someone yours, it's never just a name;
it's always been about the profound feeling, more than what you demand.
so you've gained a stark wisdom from this lonely, taxing game.
ah, i see why you are so alone in this land—
just waiting for life's next lesson, or simply waiting for the relentless cycle of these difficult lessons to cease.

-Pratyush Srivastava, ME, 2029

अर्धरात्रि

आधी रात बीत चुकी, आधी में जगा हूँ
शायद कुछ सपनों को खुली आँखों से देखना चाहता हूँ
मेरी इस चाहत का सूर्योदय होगा कभी
या ज़िन्दगी बस खत्म यही
शायद अब थका सा हूँ
आधी रात बीत चुकी, आधी में जगा हूँ

शायद अब मेरी कोई पहचान नहीं
यह मन बस हताश-निराश-एकान्त कहीं
अब किसी का साथ नहीं, किसी की आस नहीं,
कुछ मेरे पास नहीं,
आधी रात बीत चुकी, आधी में जगा हूँ

शायद मन कहता, अब तो बस आगे गंगा अपार खड़ी
क्या अब यही अन्त मेरा—यही?
नहीं! अभी नहीं... जीवन का साथ कैसे छोड़ दूँ
खुद से मुँह क्यों मोड़ लूँ
अब बहुत हुआ, हृदय में अपार अग्नि भर में शिव से बोलूँ
आधी रात बीत चुकी, आधी में जगा हूँ।

-Saurabh kumar
Mtech EE, 2027

पहला प्यार

पहली बार देखा था उसे
बारिश में झूमती कहीं
हवा में लहरते बाल, होंठों पर मुस्कान
हाय! मीन जैसी तेरी वह आँख
क्या यही पहला प्यार

जैसे नीले अंबर का वह चांद
संध्या का विराम
देखू तुझे बार बार
हाय फिर से वह मुस्कान, अब बता भी क्या यही पहला प्यार

-Saurabh kumar
Mtech EE, 2027

मुसाफ़िर

सपनों को अपनों के, बाँधे समेटे, एक बस्ते में लेकर है निकला मुसाफ़िर।

हौसला भी तो टूटा है, हर शख्स मुखौटा है, फिर भी नए शहर में बसने को, है निकला मुसाफ़िर।

ना अन्न का दाना, ना छत का ठिकाना है,
फिर भी विपत्ति से लड़ने को, है निकला मुसाफ़िर।

ख़री-खोटी बातें हैं, साहब की लातें हैं,
बातों को सब सहकर, काम करता मुसाफ़िर।

हर रोज़ नए घाव, हर शाम पुरानी है, उसके ख्वाबों की ना कोई कहानी है।
शिक्षा की चाहत को, घर की उस राहत को, कई पीछे छोड़कर है निकला मुसाफ़िर।

ना छाँव की परवाह, ना पसीने की चिंता है, पसीने की ही स्याही से, लिखता अपनी वो कविता है।
खुद टूटकर भी तो, सब कुछ को सहकर भी, अपनों के उन सपनों को, है बुनता मुसाफ़िर।

ना नाम की चिंता, ना शोहरत ना सपना है, बस अपनों के जीवन को सुख से तो भरना है।
अधूरे उन सपनों को, चाहतों के अपनों के, पूरी करने को है निकला मुसाफ़िर।

-Bambam harsh Choudhary, CSE, 2028

Forgettable, Yet Unforgotten

Removing clutter from the corners once known
Gliding through dust where old memories have grown Unfolding ruins, sacred and deep
My heart takes over—won't let me sleep

A life once lived, now fragments and sighs
Moments that breathed, now buried in lies
How could what made us feel alive
Be the same thing that taught us to survive
By lying down in silence, under endless skies
In nights too long, where the old heart cries?

Turning pages stained yellow and worn
It feels too good to relive what's torn
Those sixth grade dares, those first crushes,
The promises whispered in hallway hushes
How did we let those days slip blind
When our lives were stories perfectly timed
On old cracky furniture with dreams so kind?

A regular classroom, so plain, so dry,
Yet somehow, you alone caught my eye
I sat behind, never beside,
Watched from the back as time would glide
I followed paths, but wished I'd stay
To pave the roads that led your way
But seventh graders hearts don't always see
They had became just a second choice in this flee

Whenever the prince stayed home to rest
My homework filled your academic quest
Whenever the prince was out of view
My ears caught secrets you never knew
But silence grew in what we never said
While your eyes found castles in his stead
How did I not see ,the prince, the gate
The fort where I wished to seal our fate

Now looking back, I still recall
Those faces, moments, that classroom hall
I reached a hand you couldn't see
While you reached out toward someone free
Still, weren't we friends? If not much more
Good friends, worth holding at the core?

We were warned, tenth grade breaks the ties
Childhood ends as time just flies.
Some chase dreams, some chase the night
Some drift away, out of sight
Friends born of innocence, replaced in the end
By strangers who share what trends they defend

I know psychology and physics don't often align
But maybe we could've blurred that line
Talked Arctic Monkeys, hummed MARDY'S BUM,
A soundtrack of youth, like a soft drum.
But you played wild cards with no goodbye
Changed your school, let the old truth die

If it were all good, so why didn't I see
We were just 'acquaintances' labeled as 'we'?
Off your socials in barely a week,
Was I really so forgettable, so weak?

But I won't forget those photos, that space
Hold more than an SSD could ever embrace
And no, I won't lie, I stalk your Spotify
That playlist plays like a whispered goodbye
It still feels like we sit side by side,
Lost in a song we used to confide

And maybe I got hooked on that toxic taste,
Of memories stored in a frozen place

Now I don't hope you'll circle back round
I've planted my feet on newer ground
But in yellowed pages and Mardy's refrain
You're still a part of my sweet, old pain
Not every bond is built to last
Some just echo from the past
And that's okay some love, some friends,
Aren't forever, but we still make amends

-Divij sharma, EE,2028

हनुमान लीला

प्रभु के चरण में आना था,
माँ का सम्मान बचाना था।
अनंत समुद्र ललकार रहा था,
हँस-हँस कर पुकार रहा था।

विकट समस्या घेर रही थी,
आत्मबल राहें फेर रही थीं।
लेकिन उस पार पहुँचना था,
प्रकृति प्रखर से लड़ना था।

भयानक लहरें थीं सामने,
और पीछे तूफ़ान पड़ा था,
साथ में थी वानर सेना,
और आगे हनुमान खड़ा था।
पर चिंतन एक करना था—
खुद के भय से लड़ना था।

स्वभाव अपने अनुकूल गए वो,
अपनी शक्ति ही भूल गए वो।
फिर जामवंत ने याद दिलाया,
उनके शक्ति का पाठ पढ़ाया—

“तुम अनंत, अनश्वर हनुमान हो, तुम ईश्वर्य बल का गिर्बान हो।
प्रलय प्रचंड जिनकी गोद पली हो,
तुम वो प्राक्रमी बजरंगबली हो।”

खुद के अंदर झाँको तुम,
अपने सामर्थ्य पहचानो तुम।
सूर्य निगल जो सकता है
अपनी भूख मिटाने को,
तेरी एक छलांग ही काफ़ी है
समुद्र पार कर जाने को।

अब हनुमान जी धारण कर लिए अपना रूप भयानकर,
आँखों में रक्तधारा थी, मन में बैठे थे शंकर।
बिजली चमके, चिखें बादल, चारों ओर अँधेरा छाए, जब पलक झपकते हनुमान जी समुद्र सारा लाँघ आए।

अब सामने लंका था,
मन में न कोई शंका था।
उस महल के बीचोबीच में,
सिंशपा वृक्ष के नीचे में,
माँ सीता सहमी उदास थीं,
अशोक वाटिका के पास थीं।

हनुमान ने उन्हें आह्वान किया,
प्रभु का उन्होंने नाम लिया।
फिर राम-लिखी अँगूठी को
माँ के हाथों में भेंट किया।
राम नाम सुनते ही माँ ने
सारी यादें समेट लिया।

अब बचकर बाहर आना था,
प्रभु तक संदेश पहुँचाना था।
जब वानर का उन्होंने वेश लिया,
रावण ने फिर आदेश दिया—
“लंका से इसको दूर भगा दो,
पूँछ में इसकी आग लगा दो।”

जब पूँछ में उनके लगी आग,
तो त्राहि-त्राहि मचा दिया,
उनको न जलन हुई तनिक,
पर लंका पूरा जला दिया।

—Daya Shankar, 2029

ADULTING

Adulting feels cool until,
You start to lose your goodwill.
Being alone is peace,
Until the silence will not cease.

You feel less human, day by day,
Nothing bothers, come what may.
No fear, no rush, no anxious cries,
Just going with the flow of life.

You care less,
Or feel less?
Maybe you just need some time,
A fleeting pause, a healing rhyme.
Or a little while,
To smile again, to truly feel,
To find a joy that once was real.
For if you're steady, calm, at ease,
Why does this silence fail to please?

A little while you were thinking right -
What if I were at solace,
At a steady pace?
Then why is this silence killing you?
Why is the peace not peaceful anymore?

Is it the fact that you wanna go back
To the you who felt every little joy
a bit more joyous?
Every mistake made you
a little more cautious,
And every fight made you cry...

But didn't you want to be strong?
Then why look back for so long?
Aren't you happy being responsible,
Losing your over-depth and childishness?

So what is the repent for?
What is the yearning at your core?

Perhaps the truth is simple, not obscure
You only miss the you that felt secure.

The rain that refused to fall saying everything without saying it all There she walked,
alone once more,
with burdens laid quietly behind her,
content in her stride,
at peace with the winding roads she chose.
Through nights of doubt,
through mirrors of introspection,
she held debates in the dark,
argued with silence,
and put her whole world on trial -
every belief, every face,
every truth she once called hers,
But slowly,
she found a will of her own,
a lens through which the world made sense
She realised,
It wasn't selfish-
the desire to live on her terms to want her own peace
to want her own path
To stop setting herself on fire
just to keep others warm
She saw now,
she couldn't be everyone's sun
And that was okay.
In that stillness,
she met someone new-
herself,
Not polished, not perfect.
But real, kind and clear
Love, she learned, begins within
It's quiet, unshakable,
It's hers.
She realised after loving herself,
this path of self discovery wasn't easy,
It broke her down, it built her back.
It made her cry, then made her breathe.
but after all these thoughts
she was affected no more not even by the rain that refused to fall!

-Kanishka Yadav, EE'2028

Hardships which brought Ikneus and Brugune closer

PART I

It was just 5 days back, when Jubert, Brugune, Ziegurb and Ikneus were playing Cidrala in a yellow amber viscous lake, just at the side of a fairy- forest. At that time, the four boys were swimming, on the viscous lake, fighting each other using hands, legs, paws, claws, spells and the occult magic they had discovered on the lake, to knock each other out of the game, either by drowning a boy into deep depths, or by pushing a player out of the lake, or forcing him to float on air for 10 seconds.

Ziegurb was attacking Ikneus in the middle of the galle - a sparkling and effulgent honey-ish pool. Ziegurb was in attack mode while Ikneus was defending himself for the time being.

Jubert still remembered the time. Ziegurb had held out a transparent glass can, from which several creatures - gruesome, horrifying and even macabre - were peering out of the can. Soon, they hissed and started approaching dangerously towards him. All of those snake heads hissing and mise-beast faces flexing their sharp teeth.

And when for the first time, a snake - of the thickness of a rope - jerked and tried to attack Ikneus, he jumped down and let the snake bite air. Soon, all of the snakes, tiny line baby wolves, Bingo-Reeches, spieres, flamers and baby muss-dragons kept attacking Ikneus, and he kept dodging every single attack with his occult, lithe movements. He was the prince-trainer of these movements, called Ludhaara arts. This form of physical art was highly esoteric on the planet, only people from a select few tribes and descendants get the right body type and the level of ebullience to learn this art form.

And Ikneus - a 13 years old boy - was training since he was four, and had only gulped the basics of this bellicose art form. Even he knew his training was going to become more demanding in the future.

"In future, I know I would have to keep a stiff upper lip and be ready to summon a lot of aplomb in demanding tasks," he had spoken to him once while taking a nap inside the in-tree cave with Ikneus.

At the age of 12, he had gone to the international Shrupkuster Cup at Riburanza. This contest was held every 3 years, and these cups were perfect opportunities for a serious participant to earn some feathers in his or her cap in the participant's - lifelong journey of this art.

Jubert recalled what Ikneus had told him about his cup there.

In some contests, he went down in flames and faced a heavy, acrimonious scolding from his father. His mother held a maudlin cry asking him over and over again if he was flagging, and if he felt he needed to restart his training from square one. No wonder his brothers managed to laugh up their sleeves even in those tenebrous times, part of the reason why he does not talk much with his brothers. That was the reason why he occasionally obfuscated his news when speaking with his family, especially that news which he knew he would be pushed into hot water with his parents, or that news which gave him a trepidation that his grandfather might hit the ceiling.

Ikneus was perfectly aware of his contentious brothers and of his choleric, truculent parents. He was perfectly aware of the fact that the slightest of his setbacks might turn into an hour-long obstreperous upheaval in the house. Hence, he had gone completely taciturn and reticent in his own home, even though he was a perfectly cheerful and loquacious boy among his friends. He loved to spend hours and hours with Ziegurb, Jubert, and oh my goodness he loved being with his very, very close friend – Brugune.

The boy with blond hair, sparkling yellow eyes, rosy-pink cheeks and a mellifluous voice. Very sweet, kind... just couldn't play a physical game with that much strength Ziegurb and Jubert could, let alone Ikneus.

Maybe he was physically weak, maybe he was not able to hold heavy furniture like almirahs for five seconds in a row when a neighbour needed help from the kids with shifting. But he still played with everyone, enjoyed the game himself and radiated joy and laughter to others.

Ikneus had only one problem with him. He had to eat this heart listening to Brugune's tales about his family, because Brugune never had to surreptitiously hide his inner child in the middle of an interminable toxic conflict with his vituperative parents powered by supercilious elder brothers for past few years, something Brugune could relate to a few years before.

At that time, Brugune's entire family was standing with him, and supporting his dream. He lived with his mother, his father and his two elder sisters – Rezalgun and Danika.

PART II

His elder sisters used to be his hostile enemies since when he was a kid. Brugune hadn't done anything yet his sisters threw him under the bus every single day, making sure for whatever mischief and blunders they did, Brugune could be blamed for everything; he would get scolded from his mommy and get beaten mercilessly by his daddy. Every day when no one was around, the sisters would beat him and bully him, leaving him with a torn heart to sleep with every night.

This continued for years until one morning, when one of the sisters had nearly ended her brother's life. Danika gets shockwaves in her heart when she remembers the day even years after the tragic incident. The mere sight of seeing a gentle child, being thrown down from second floor, just to land on pieces of broken wooden chairs and furniture under the stairs. Blood slowly pouring out of his forehead... then his shoulders... then his back... it was raining on the floor. Soon, his entire body was painted with blood, while he remained still, unconscious on the pieces of broken furniture. No breathing, no pounding, no sign of life, just uncontrolled bleeding. Danika had shouted his name hundreds of times while trying to wake him up almost a thousand times, before she went to pieces.

It was only after this near-death that Danika had a change of heart, and started to treat her brother like a human being.

As for Rezagürn, she had already started maturing weeks before the tragic incident. Her soul had started to shadow her inner devil long before Danika's did. Her emotions had begun to show up in her body, and her heart for her younger brother, still incipient, had started to comfort both him and her.

She had stopped participating in bullying, and had started focusing on her choice for education. She even occasionally left treats for Brugune here and there, and talked with him about the stuff around them.

Sadly, she had never raised her voice in front of Danika until it was almost too late. Even after one of his sisters had turned sweet, the years of bullying, followed by occasional scolding from his parent had turned him lugubrious - never interested in talking to her unless she really tried. Even when he was asked to talk in his family dining table, he offered nothing more than short, terse sentences, before taking a mouthful of Kierce yet again. Rezag worried deeply about him, and still she couldn't gather the courage to tell her sister to stop. It was only at the night before the tragic incident that she finally spoke to Danika about this issue. At that night, Rezag was feeling ominous that Danika's cruelty might cause a permanent, ineffable damage to their brother. But even she had fell short of her argument to persuade Danika. She was extremely intransigent, completely in denial, just wanting to prove her dominance over her younger brother.

"He must be taught to keep a stiff upper lip you know!"

"Rezal, don't be stupid! Today, he stubbornly refused to clean my bathroom mess over and over again. Such a filthy and pathetic, recalcitrant boy? Doesn't he have any manners?"

"Don't be so stubbornly imperious! He is not your servant! He will never, ever clean YOUR MESS!", Rezal tried to ratiocinate, "he will clean his own mess. You clean yours."

Rezal tried to argue for her brother again and again, but Danika managed to hit back with her response each time. Their two-hour argument had ended like this -

"Look, Rezal. I'm at the end of my rope. I swear If you infuriate me any more, I will release my ultra-sharp black finger nails and kill yo-"

"WATCH YOUR LANGUAGE!", Rezal shouted at the top of her lungs.

"Just because you have the privilege to attend premier lessons of bloodwasopian, it doesn't mean everyone around you must grovel in obsequious submission."

Brugune, Rezal, Danika and their parents belonged to one single specie - Erkbuliena, or as many people called, Erkbulie.

Erkbulies are very gentle and complex creatures. Typically having round eyes with an admirable and colourful glow, silky hair and juicy lips, Erkbulies are reputed for their charm, cheerfulness, and their unwavering commitment to duties and ethics they were taught since childhood. Erkbulies - when loved someone - did so with ineffable feeling. However, they were also notorious for their byzantine psychology - so jungled in instinct and emotion that even they seldomly understood their own emotions.

Sometimes they were laughing and sanguine, sometimes they were choleric and irritating. Many a times, they were completely phlegmatic and laconic - completely uninterested in talking, and other times they were outrageously garrulous. They were so driven by emotions that they could start weeping, out of the blue, even when called out for the tiniest of their mistakes.

.....

- WRITTEN BY SAMARTH GOYAL , DSAI, 2028

PRISONERS

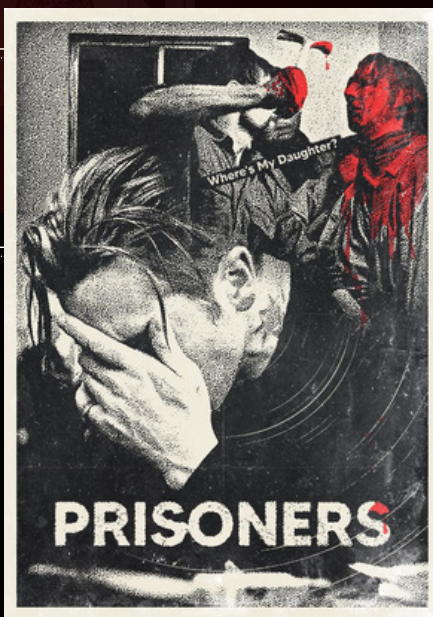

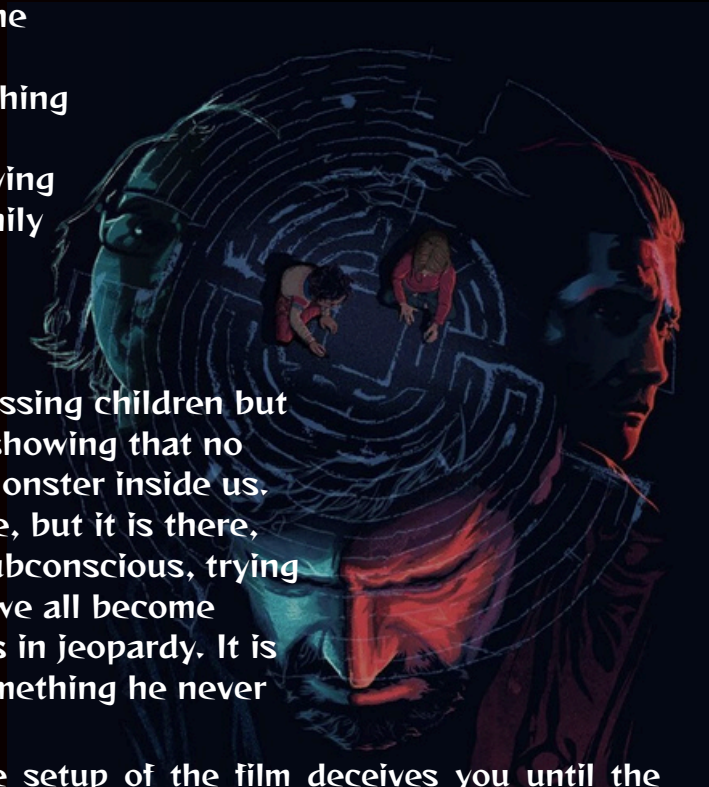

TWO GIRLS, TWO FAMILIES, AND THE DAY OF THANKSGIVING.

What could go wrong?

ONLY EVERYTHING.

Dennis Villeneuve's Prisoners starts exactly as most families end their holiday: with full stomachs, tired kids, and the assumption that the world they are a part of is completely safe. This gut-wrenching thriller begins with Keller Dover (played by Hugh Jackman) enjoying Thanksgiving with a friend's family when both of their younger daughters go missing, and the illusion of safety shatters.

This story isn't about finding missing children but is a mirror held up to all of us, showing that no matter who we are, we have a monster inside us. We might never feel its presence, but it is there, scratching at the walls of our subconscious, trying to get out. It is a story of what we all become when safety of our loved ones is in jeopardy. It is a story of a father becoming something he never dreamed of for his daughter.

The setup of the film deceives you until the very end. Detective Loki (played by Jake Gyllenhaal) arrests the most obvious suspect extremely early in the case. The suspect is a mentally impaired man, and we think that the case is closed. However, the guy cannot or will not talk and since there is no evidence, he is released. After the police have done what they do, Keller does what desperate fathers do; he takes matters into his own hands, and that is when everything goes wrong. The movie is NOT a revenge fantasy; it shows what a man can become when pushed to his limits and challenges you to disagree with the choices he makes.

MOVIE REVIEW

-RONAK BOTHRA, BTECH'29

REVEREND INSANITY

- GU ZHEN REN

This novel is one of the top 3 web novels of the current generation. Though this novel has been banned by the Chinese government from further release of the next chapters, this action has only led to help in augmenting the fame of its incredible storyline.

Unlike the usual webnovels, or any fiction storyline where the main character being somehow chosen by fate and led by heavens towards saving the world, this novel far contrasts such a storyline as the main character is an antagonist, a transmigrator, a regressor, that was thrown into a world where Gu worms and Gu masters run amock.

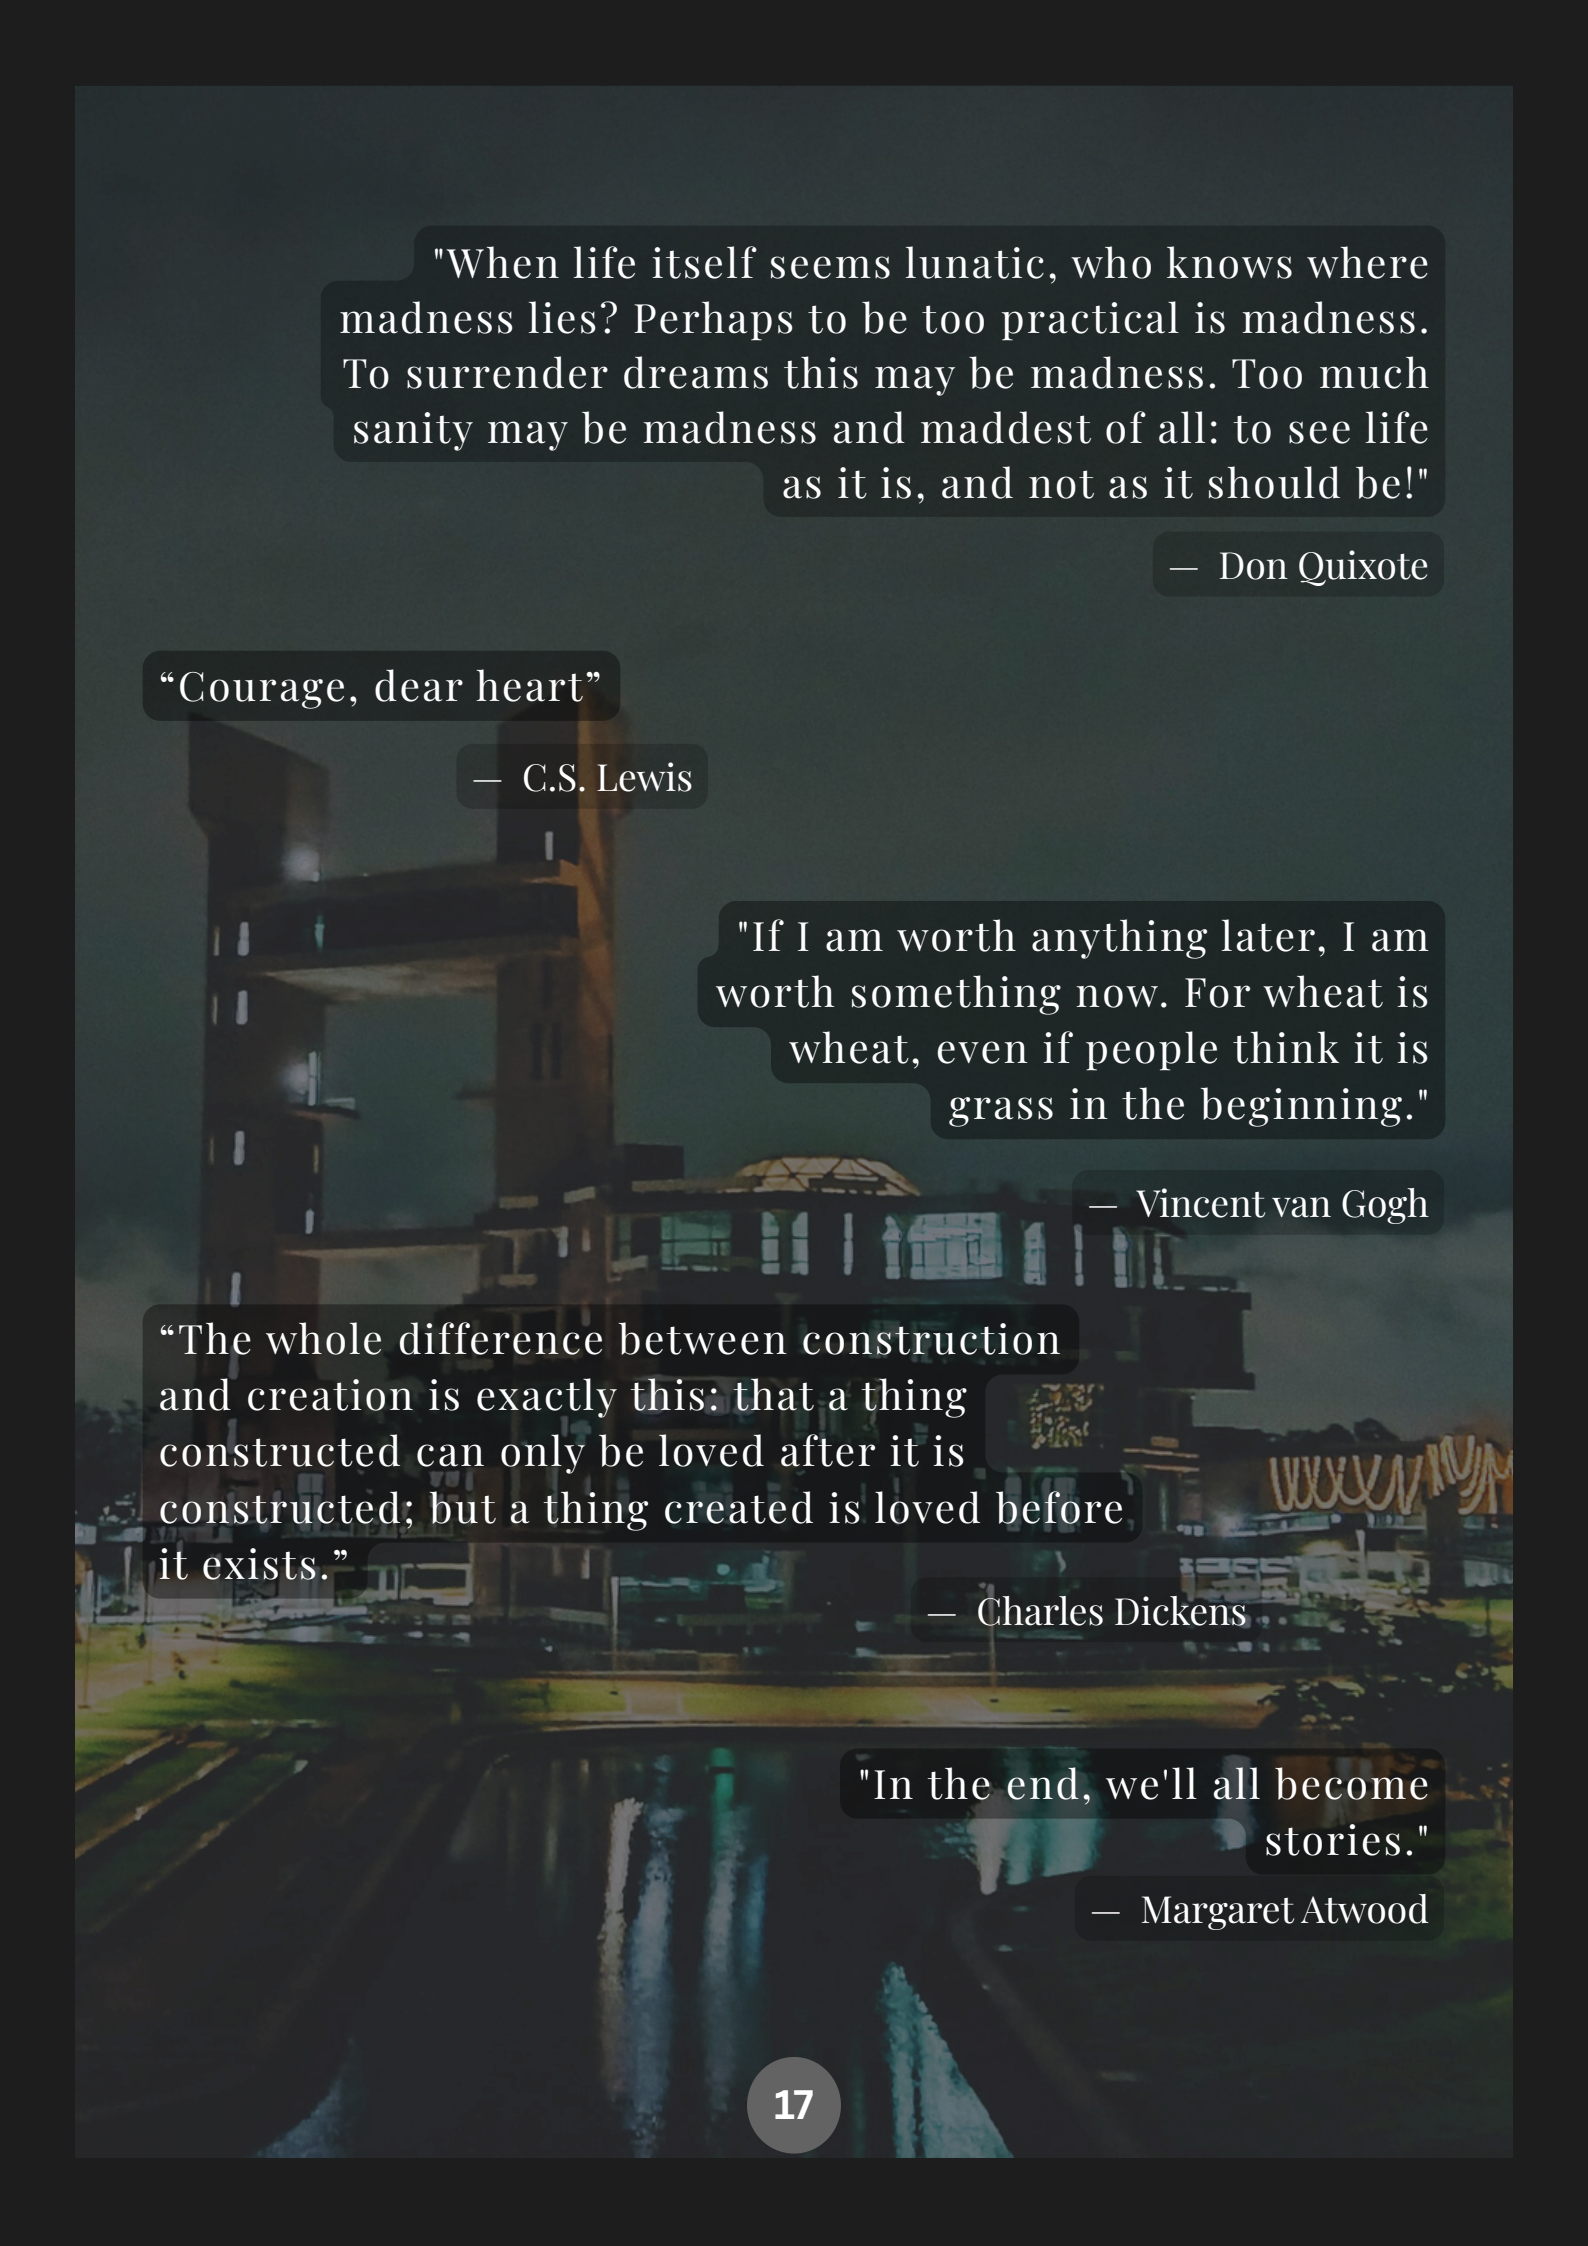

He one who strives for eternal life, who is hunted by the heavens and fate of the world, unlike the chosen lucky people. The MC strives towards his goal with perseverance that no god can rival, a keen eye for opportunities to exploit that help in his growth, and his 500 years of experience in his previous and his invaluable knowledge of earth.

One aspect of this novel that sets it apart from every single other novel is that, the reader goes through character development throughout the novel while the main character stays the same.

On the whole reading this novel is an experience that no reader can ever forget, the storyline, the plot twist, the mindsets and the bitter truths of the world revealed in the novel are a must read to every reader who is interested in exploring the grey area of morals and humanity.

BOOK REVIEW

-ASISH GORLE, BTECH'29

"When life itself seems lunatic, who knows where madness lies? Perhaps to be too practical is madness. To surrender dreams this may be madness. Too much sanity may be madness and maddest of all: to see life as it is, and not as it should be!"

— Don Quixote

"Courage, dear heart"

— C.S. Lewis

"If I am worth anything later, I am worth something now. For wheat is wheat, even if people think it is grass in the beginning."

— Vincent van Gogh

"The whole difference between construction and creation is exactly this: that a thing constructed can only be loved after it is constructed; but a thing created is loved before it exists."

— Charles Dickens

"In the end, we'll all become stories."

— Margaret Atwood

CONTRIBUTORS:

Editors

- Kanishka Yadav
- Utkarsh Chatterjee
- V. Varshitha
- Madan Vishwakarma

Designers

- Ankan Mondal
- Pooja Dange

Our Website

Contact us:

Follow us:

GOALS CORE 2025-26

Utkarsh Chatterjee
Secretary

Kanishka Yadav
Secretary

Madan Vishwakarma
Hindi Editor

V. Varshitha
English Editor

Sakshi Srivastava
Outreach Head

Pooja Dange
Social Media Handler

Kushagra Katore
Website Manager

Ankan Mondal
Designing Head